

Fine-tuning Report: eCFR Title 12 Regulation Assistant

Base vs CPT vs SFT vs DPO vs GRPO on every chapter of 12 CFR (Banks and Banking)

Generated: 2026-09-20 20:20 UTC

Model evaluated: meta-llama/Meta-Llama-3.1-8B-Instruct

Compute: cuda (44.4 GB VRAM), dtype bfloat16, 4-bit QLoRA: False

Seed: 42 | Config hash: a5b753ded5f2

Stages trained: CPT, SFT, DPO, GRPO | Checkpoints evaluated: base, cpt, sft, dpo, grpo

What was built

LoRA adapters for Meta-Llama-3.1-8B-Instruct specialised in U.S. banking regulation, trained on a point-in-time snapshot (2025-01-01) of eCFR Title 12, all chapters (7,199 sections across 16 chapters). Four techniques are compared against the untuned base:

1. CPT — continued pretraining: causal-LM on the raw regulation text (train+val sections only) so the model absorbs the domain before instruction tuning
2. SFT — supervised fine-tuning on grounded Q&A built from the regulations, continuing the CPT adapter
3. DPO — preference tuning on top of SFT: correct+cited answers preferred over wrong sections, wrong citations, or vague non-answers
4. GRPO — RL with verifiable rewards on top of SFT (citation correctness, grounding F1, brevity/anti-repetition guard); no reward model

Pipeline: download -> build -> CPT -> SFT -> DPO -> GRPO -> eval -> report -> publish

Dataset

CPT train docs	5187 rows
CPT val docs	638 rows
SFT train	14722 rows
SFT val	1797 rows
DPO pairs	10374 rows
Held-out eval	300 rows

Split is by section via a stable hash — no section text or prompt can leak from train into eval (asserted at build time); CPT also sees train+val sections only. Eval examples are sampled round-robin across chapters so every agency's rules are tested, not just Chapter I (OCC). Question types: overview, provisions, citation_lookup (unique headings only), definition. Details: data/dataset_card.md.

Evaluation protocol

Greedy decoding, fixed seed, 300 held-out examples the model never saw in training. Metrics: citation_accuracy (predicted § matches the target section), wrong_citation_rate (confidently cites the wrong section — lower is better), token_f1 and ROUGE-L vs a grounded reference answer, avg answer length in words. Every held-out example and every checkpoint's answer is reproduced in the appendix.

Training configuration

All knobs live in config.yaml

LoRA adapter (one adapter, carried through CPT -> SFT -> DPO/GRPO)

rank r=16 alpha=32 dropout=0.05
target modules: q_proj, k_proj, v_proj, o_proj, gate_proj, up_proj, down_proj

Per-stage hyperparameters

	CPT	SFT	DPO	GRPO
epochs (configured)	2	2	1	300 steps
epochs (reached)	2.00	2.00	1.00	0.12
learning rate	0.0001	0.0002	5e-06	1e-05
per-device batch	2	2	1	4
grad accumulation	8	8	8	4
effective batch	16	16	8	16
max seq length	2048	2048	1536	768
warmup ratio	0.03	0.03	0.05	0.03
init from	base	cpt	sft	sft

CPT: packed causal-LM on 'citation heading (chapter) / text' documents; val perplexity logged

DPO: beta = 0.1 (reference = frozen SFT adapter, no second model in memory)

GRPO: 4 generations/prompt, temperature 0.9, beta 0.0 (no KL ref), max 260 new tokens

Stage chaining

CPT trains a fresh LoRA on the base model from raw regulation text. SFT continues that same adapter on Q&A. DPO and GRPO both start from the SFT adapter, so their comparison isolates what each preference/RL step adds on top of the same supervised model.

GRPO reward design (verifiable, no reward model)

citation_reward  +1.0 correct § cited (capped at 0.25 if >3 sections spammed),
                  -0.5 confidently wrong citation, 0.0 if no citation grounding_reward token-F1 overlap with the grounded reference answer brevity_reward   -0.3 if >320 words; extra -0.5 for degenerate repetition

Precision / hardware policy

cuda: bf16 (or fp16), 4-bit QLoRA when VRAM < 40 GB, paged 8-bit AdamW mps (Apple Silicon): un-quantized LoRA, bf16 when supported, eager attention cpu: float32 – intended for --smoke validation only

How to read this overview / provisions test grounded summarization of a named section;

citation_lookup tests recalling the right § from a heading alone (hardest);
definition tests retrieving regulatory definitions verbatim.

Loading an adapter

from peft import PeftModel; from transformers import AutoModelForCausalLM base = AutoModelForCausalLM.from_pretrained('meta-llama/Meta-Llama-3.1-8B-Instruct') model = PeftModel.from_pretrained(base, '<repo_id>', revision='<commit>')

Each repo carries the adapter, tokenizer, README and provenance.json (data hashes, base revision, stage) so any result in this report can be traced to exact weights.

How to run / reproduce

Setup

python3 -m venv .venv && source .venv/bin/activate pip install -r requirements.txt echo HF_TOKEN=... >> .env      # gated meta-llama repo + Hub publishing echo GITHUB_TOKEN=... >> .env  # final git push of data/results/report

Full pipeline (single GPU node, auto-detects device)

./run_all.sh  # download -> build -> cpt -> sft -> dpo -> grpo -> eval -> report -> push python training_models_v1.py eval  # re-score; cached generations reused (--regen to redo) python training_models_v1.py report # regenerate this PDF + results/examples_all.md

Scope

config.yaml ecfr.chapter = null (whole title, every chapter) snapshot date 2025-01-01; eval cap 300 examples, round-robin by chapter

Device selection

--device auto    CUDA if visible, else Apple Silicon GPU (MPS), else CPU
--device cuda     bf16/fp16 + 4-bit QLoRA below the VRAM threshold

Artifacts

Reproducibility

Global seed 42; greedy decoding at eval; eCFR snapshot pinned to 2025-01-01; splits derived from stable hashes of section numbers (not RNG order); every stage writes a manifest with the config hash and SHA-256 of its data inputs.

Honest-reporting policy

Every metric regression vs the base model is flagged (never hidden) here and in results/report.md; every held-out example is reproduced in the appendix so the aggregate numbers can be audited case by case.

12 CFR § 1102.27, 'Computing time', outlines the rules for calculating time periods in the context of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) regulations. The key provisions of this section are as follows:

- Time is computed by excluding the day of a banking holiday, but not the day of a non-banking holiday. (12 CFR § 1102.27(a))
- When the last day of a time period falls on a non-banking holiday, the time period is extended to the next business day. (12 CFR § 1102.27(b))
- When the last day of a time period falls on a banking holiday, the time period is extended to the next business day. (12 CFR § 1102.27(c))
- If a banking holiday falls on a Saturday, the preceding Friday is considered the last day for performing an action. (12 CFR § 1102.27(d))
- If a banking holiday falls on a Sunday, the following Monday is considered the last day for performing an action. (12 CFR § 1102.27(e))

These provisions ensure that time periods are calculated in a consistent and predictable manner, taking into account both banking and non-banking holidays.

Reference answer (ground truth, expects § 1081.202)

Key provisions of 12 CFR § 1081.202 ('Amended pleadings'): (a) Amendments before the hearing. The notice of charges, answer, or any other pleading may be amended or supplemented only with the opposing party's written consent or leave of the hearing officer. The respondent must answer an amended notice of charges within the time remaining for the respondent's answer to the original notice of charges, or within 14 days after service of the amended notice of charges, whichever is later, unless the hearing officer orders otherwise for good cause. (b) Amendments to conform to the evidence. When issues not raised in the notice of charges or answer are tried at the hearing by express or implied consent of the parties, they will be treated in all respects as if they had been raised in the notice of charges or answer, and no formal amendments are required. If evidence is objected to at the hearing on the ground that it is not within the issues raised by the notice of charges or answer, the hearing officer may admit the evidence when admission is likely to assist in adjudicating the merits of the action and the objecting party fails to satisfy the hearing officer that the admission of such evidence would unfairly prejudice that party's action or defense upon the merits.

12 CFR § 1102.27, "Computing time," covers the rules for calculating time periods in the context of banking regulations.

In plain terms, this section explains how to determine the start and end of time periods, including:

- Time is computed on a 24-hour clock.
- Time periods are calculated from the date and time specified in the regulation or agreement.
- If a time period ends on a non-business day, the next business day is considered the end of the time period.
- If a time period begins on a non-business day, the next business day is considered the start of the time period.

This section aims to provide clarity and consistency in calculating time-sensitive deadlines and requirements in banking regulations.

12 CFR § 238.41 deals with the requirements for qualified stock issuances by undercapitalized savings associations or holding companies.

In simpler terms, this regulation addresses the rules for savings associations or holding companies that are undercapitalized (i.e., do not meet the minimum capital requirements) to issue new stock without being considered a capital restoration plan.

The regulation outlines the conditions under which such issuances are considered "qualified" and therefore do not trigger the capital restoration plan requirements.

I couldn't find any information on 12 CFR § 308.121. It's possible that this section does not exist or is not a valid section in the Code of Federal Regulations (12 CFR).

However, I can suggest that you may be looking for 12 CFR § 308.121, which is part of the Federal Reserve's regulations for Bank Holding Companies (BHCs).

12 CFR § 308.121 (Notification to primary regulator) requires a bank holding company to notify its primary federal regulator of certain events, such as the acquisition of a bank or a nonbanking company, or the establishment of a new subsidiary. The primary federal regulator is typically the Federal Reserve, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), or the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), depending on the type of bank holding company.

If you could provide more context or information about the section you are looking for, I may be able to provide a more accurate answer.

(a) Words importing the singular include the plural, and vice versa. (12 CFR § 1209.2(a))

This means that when a regulation uses a singular noun or verb, it also applies to the plural form, and vice versa.

(b) Words importing the masculine gender include the feminine and neuter genders. (12 CFR § 1209.2(b))

This provision ensures that regulations apply equally to both men and women, and to individuals of all genders.

(c) Words importing a natural person include a partnership, association, trust, estate, and other unincorporated organization. (12 CFR § 1209.2(c))

This means that regulations apply not only to individuals but also to various types of organizations, such as partnerships, associations, trusts, and estates.

(d) Words importing a corporation include a bank, a trust company, a savings bank, a savings association, a credit union, and other similar institutions. (12 CFR § 1209.2(d))

This provision ensures that regulations apply to various types of financial institutions supervision for a national bank or federal savings association.

These factors include:

- The size of the institution
- The complexity of the institution's operations
- The interconnectedness of the institution with other financial institutions
- The potential for the institution's failure to have significant economic consequences
- The institution's risk profile, including its asset size, leverage, and off-balance-sheet exposures

The OCC uses these factors to determine whether an institution poses a risk to the stability of the U.S. financial system and to determine the level of supervision and regulation required to mitigate that risk.

Reference answer (ground truth, expects § 408.1)

Key provisions of 12 CFR § 408.1 ('Background'): (a) The National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) establishes national policies and goals for the protection of the environment. Section 102(2) of NEPA contains certain procedural requirements directed toward the attainment of such goals. In particular, all Federal agencies are required to give appropriate consideration to the environmental effects of their proposed actions in their decision-making and to prepare detailed environmental statements on recommendations or reports on proposals for legislation and other major Federal Actions significantly affecting the quality of the human environment. (b) Executive Order 11991 of May 24, 1977, directed the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) to issue regulations to implement the procedural provisions of NEPA (NEPA Regulations). Accordingly, CEQ issued final NEPA Regulations which are binding on all Federal agencies as of July 30, 1979 (40 CFR parts 1500 through 1508) on November 29, 1979. These Regulations provide that each Federal agency shall as necessary adopt implementing procedures to supplement the NEPA Regulations. Section 1507.3(b) of the NEPA Regulations identifies those sections of the NEPA Regulations which must be addressed in agency procedures.

The key provisions of 12 CFR § 408.1 include:

1. The regulation applies to bank holding companies (BHCs) and their nonbank subsidiaries (12 CFR § 408.1(a)).
2. The regulation is intended to ensure that BHCs and their nonbank subsidiaries operate in a safe and sound manner and comply with applicable laws and regulations (12 CFR § 408.1(b)).
3. The regulation is also intended to promote the stability of the U.S. financial system (12 CFR § 408.1(b)).
4. The regulation is based on the Federal Reserve's authority under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 CFR § 408.1(c)).

These provisions set the stage for the subsequent regulations in 12 CFR Part 408, which outline the Federal Reserve's supervision and regulation of BHCs and their nonbank subsidiaries.

Reference answer (ground truth, expects § 1102.105)

Key provisions of 12 CFR § 1102.105 ('Requests for amendment of records'): (a) Place to make requests. A request by an individual to amend records pertaining to him or her may be made in person during normal business hours at the ASC located at 1325 G Street NW, Suite 500, Washington, DC 20005, or by mail addressed to the Privacy Act Officer, ASC, 1325 G Street NW, Suite 500, Washington, DC 20005. (1) Information to be included in requests. Each request to amend an ASC record shall reasonably describe the record sought to be amended. Such description should include, for example, relevant names, dates and subject matter to permit the record to be located among the records maintained by the ASC. An individual who has requested that a record pertaining to the individual be amended will be advised promptly if the record cannot be located on the basis of the description given and that further identifying information is necessary before the request can be processed. An initial evaluation of a request presented in person will be made immediately to ensure that the request is complete and to indicate what, if any, additional information will be required. Verification of the individual's identity as set forth in § 1102.102(a) (2), (3), (4) and (5) may also be required. (2) Basis for amendment.

If you are looking for information on trust accounts under the Federal Reserve, 12 CFR § 7.1000 outlines the requirements for trust accounts, including:

- The types of trust accounts that are permitted (12 CFR § 7.1000(a))
- The requirements for the creation and maintenance of trust accounts (12 CFR § 7.1000(b))
- The requirements for the handling of trust funds (12 CFR § 7.1000(c))
- The requirements for the reporting and recordkeeping of trust accounts (12 CFR § 7.1000(d))

Please note that 12 CFR § 7.1000 is under the Federal Reserve's Regulation J, not 12 CFR § 745.9-1.

12 CFR § 1240.35, which is part of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) regulations, covers the treatment of off-balance sheet exposures in the CRA assessment area.

In simpler terms, this section deals with how banks calculate their lending and investment activities in the CRA assessment area, including off-balance sheet exposures such as:

- Commitments to lend or invest
- Lines of credit
- Letters of credit
- Other similar arrangements

The section requires banks to include these off-balance sheet exposures in their CRA data collection and reporting, as if they were on-balance sheet loans or investments. This is to ensure that the CRA assessment accurately reflects the bank's activities in the assessment area.

By including off-balance sheet exposures, the CRA can better evaluate a bank's overall commitment to serving the needs of the local community, which is a key goal of the Community Reinvestment Act.

12 CFR § 704.4, which is part of the Prompt Corrective Action (PCA) regulations, covers the requirements for a bank's capital classification and the corresponding regulatory actions that the bank must take when its capital classification changes.

In simpler terms, this regulation outlines the process for identifying and addressing bank capital problems. It requires banks to maintain adequate capital levels and imposes specific requirements and restrictions on banks that fail to meet these standards.

Here's a breakdown of the key points:

1. Capital classification: The regulation defines four capital classifications for banks: well-capitalized, adequately capitalized, undercapitalized, and critically undercapitalized.
2. Capital requirements: The regulation sets minimum capital requirements for each classification, which are based on the bank's total risk-based capital ratio.
3. Regulatory actions: The regulation outlines specific actions that the bank must take when its capital classification changes, such as:
 - * Well-capitalized: No restrictions.
 - * Adequately capitalized: Limited restrictions, such as increased capital requirements.
 - * Undercapitalized: More significant restrictions, such as limits on asset growth and dividend payments.
 - * Critically undercapitalized: Severe restrictions, including the possibility of FDIC receivership.

Reference answer (ground truth, expects § 1777.26)

Key provisions of 12 CFR § 1777.26 ('Final notice of order'): (a) Determination and notice. After the Enterprise has submitted its response under § 1777.25 or the response period (as extended or shortened, if applicable) has expired, whichever occurs first, OFHEO will determine, in its discretion, whether to take into consideration such relevant information as is provided by the Enterprise in its response, if any, under § 1777.25. OFHEO will provide the Enterprise with a written final notice of any order issued by OFHEO under this subpart, which is to include a description of the basis for OFHEO's determination. (b) Termination or modification. An Enterprise that has received an order under paragraph (a) of this section remains subject to each provision of the order until each such provision terminates under the express terms of the order. The Enterprise may submit a written request to OFHEO seeking modification or termination of one or more provisions of the order. Pending OFHEO's review and approval, in OFHEO's discretion of the Enterprise's request, the Enterprise shall remain subject to the provisions of the order. (c) Enforcement of order —(1) Judicial enforcement. An order issued under paragraph (a) of this section is an order for purposes of section 1375 of the 1992 Act (12 U.S.C. 4635).

Specifically, this section outlines the requirements for FSAs to manage their investments in a way that supports the CRA's goals of promoting community development and fair lending practices.

The section requires FSAs to:

- Maintain a written investment policy that outlines their investment objectives, strategies, and risk management practices.
- Ensure that their investment activities are consistent with safe and sound banking practices.
- Consider the CRA's goals when making investment decisions.
- Provide information to the OCC (Office of the Comptroller of the Currency) about their investment activities.

By regulating investment management, this section aims to ensure that FSAs use their investments to benefit the communities they serve, while also maintaining the safety and soundness of their institutions.

12 CFR § 1320.13 covers the process for the Federal Reserve to determine whether a bank holding company or a nonbank financial company is systemically important.

The regulation states that the Federal Reserve will consider the following factors when making this determination:

- The company's size, complexity, and scope of operations
- The company's interconnectedness with other financial institutions
- The potential for the company's failure to have significant adverse effects on the financial stability of the United States
- The company's ability to pose a risk to the stability of the U.S. financial system

The regulation also requires the Federal Reserve to consider the views of the Financial Stability Oversight Council (FSOC) when making this determination.

In essence, this regulation is about identifying banks and nonbank financial companies that are so large and interconnected that their failure could pose a significant risk to the entire U.S. financial system, and thus require special oversight and regulation.

This section provides definitions for key terms used throughout the subpart, such as "community development," "low- and moderate-income," "low-income," "moderate-income," and "qualified community development activities." These definitions help clarify the scope and application of the CRA regulations.

By defining these terms, the regulation provides a clear understanding of what activities and investments qualify as community development and how banks can meet their CRA obligations.

This section provides a list of definitions for various terms used throughout the regulations, such as "bank," "bank holding company," "banking organization," and "subsidiary," among others. These definitions are essential for understanding the scope and application of the regulations.

By providing a clear and consistent understanding of these terms, 12 CFR § 303.2 helps to ensure that banks and other financial institutions comply with the regulations and that the Federal Reserve System can effectively supervise and regulate these institutions.

Some examples of definitions in 12 CFR § 303.2 include:

- "Bank" (12 CFR § 303.2(a)): A bank, as defined in section 3(a)(1) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 221a(1)).
- "Bank holding company" (12 CFR § 303.2(b)): A company that directly or indirectly owns and controls a bank.
- "Banking organization" (12 CFR § 303.2(c)): A bank, a bank holding company, a savings and loan holding company

12 CFR § 1240.3, which is part of the Capital Requirements Regulation (CRR) for U.S. banking organizations, covers the operational requirements for counterparty credit risk.

In simpler terms, this section outlines the rules and guidelines for banks to manage and mitigate the risks associated with lending or investing in counterparties (other parties) that may default or fail to meet their obligations.

This includes requirements for:

1. Counterparty credit risk management systems and processes
2. Counterparty credit risk assessment and monitoring
3. Counterparty credit risk mitigation techniques, such as credit derivatives and collateral
4. Disclosure and reporting requirements for counterparty credit risk

The goal of 12 CFR § 1240.3 is to ensure that banks have robust systems and processes in place to manage counterparty credit risk effectively, which is essential for maintaining financial stability and protecting depositors' funds.

In simpler terms, this section outlines the process and requirements for the OCC to issue orders to national banks when they find that the bank is not in compliance with banking laws or regulations. The OCC can issue orders to:

- Correct specific deficiencies or weaknesses
- Take or refrain from taking certain actions
- Implement specific policies or procedures
- Address any other issues that the OCC deems necessary to ensure the bank's safety and soundness.

The OCC must provide the bank with a written order that includes the specific requirements, a deadline for compliance, and any other relevant information. The bank must then respond to the order and provide evidence of compliance within the specified timeframe.

Key provisions of 12 CFR § 403.1 ('General policies and definitions'): (a) This regulation of the Export-Import Bank (the Bank) implements executive orders which govern the classification, declassification, and safeguarding of national security information and material of the United States. This regulation is based on Executive Order 12356, National Security Information, April 2, 1982 (3 CFR, 1982 Comp. p. 166) (hereafter referred to as the Order), Information Security Oversight Directive No. 1, June 25, 1982 (32 CFR part 2001) (hereafter referred to as the Directive), and National Security Decision Directive 84, "Safeguarding National Security Information," signed by the President on March 11, 1983 (hereafter referred to as NSDD 84). Violation of the provisions of part 403 may result in the imposition of administrative penalties, and civil and criminal penalties under applicable law. Executive Order 12356 prescribes a uniform system for classifying, declassifying, and safeguarding national security information. It recognizes that it is essential that the public be informed concerning the activities of the Government, but that the interests of the United States and its citizens require that certain information concerning the national defense and foreign relations be protected against unauthorized disclosure. Information may not be classified under the Order unless its disclosure reasonably could be expected to cause damage to the national security.

12 CFR § 169.2 covers the form of proxies that are required for certain bank holding company acquisitions.

Specifically, this regulation requires that proxies used in connection with a bank holding company acquisition must be in a specific form and contain certain information. The regulation is designed to ensure that shareholders have access to accurate and complete information about the acquisition and the bank holding company's financial condition.

The regulation requires that the proxy statement include information such as:

- * A description of the acquisition and the terms of the transaction
- * A description of the bank holding company's financial condition and prospects
- * Information about the directors and executive officers of the bank holding company
- * Information about the compensation of the bank holding company's executive officers
- * A description of any material relationships between the bank holding company and its directors, executive officers, or significant shareholders

The regulation also requires that the proxy statement be accompanied by a form of proxy that allows shareholders to vote on the acquisition. The form of proxy must be in a specific format and must include certain information, such as the name and address of the shareholder, the number of shares owned, and the vote cast.

Overall, 12 CFR § 169.2 is designed to ensure that shareholders have access to accurate and complete information about bank holding company

12 CFR § 360.3 states that the FDIC may terminate the deposit insurance coverage of a bank if the bank is in an unsafe or unsound condition, or if the bank has engaged in unsafe or unsound banking practices. The FDIC may also terminate deposit insurance coverage if the bank is in default or is likely to become insolvent.

Additionally, 12 CFR Part 360 also covers the procedures for terminating deposit insurance coverage, including notice to the bank and the public, and the process for resolving any disputes.

It's worth noting that 12 CFR Part 708 is related to the FDIC's rules and regulations, but it does not specifically cover the termination of insurance.

12 CFR § 1215.18 covers the duties and responsibilities of the Office of Inspector General (OIG) within the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC).

In plain terms, this section outlines the role of the OIG in conducting independent and objective audits, investigations, and evaluations to promote economy, efficiency, and effectiveness in the FDIC's operations. The OIG is responsible for identifying and addressing potential risks, inefficiencies, and areas for improvement within the FDIC, and for ensuring that the FDIC is complying with laws, regulations, and policies.

The OIG's duties include:

- * Conducting audits and evaluations of FDIC programs and operations
- * Investigating allegations of misconduct or wrongdoing within the FDIC
- * Identifying and addressing potential risks and vulnerabilities within the FDIC
- * Providing recommendations to the FDIC's management to improve operations and reduce risks
- * Reporting to the FDIC's Board of Directors and Congress on the OIG's findings and recommendations.

Overall, 12 CFR § 1215.18 is an important section that ensures the FDIC is operating in a transparent, accountable, and efficient manner, and that the OIG is an independent and effective watchdog over the agency's activities.

12 CFR § 226.15, 'Right of rescission,' is a key provision in the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) that protects consumers from certain types of credit transactions. The main provisions of this section are as follows:

- Transactions covered: The right of rescission applies to certain types of credit transactions, including:
 - * Refinancing of a primary residence (12 CFR § 226.15(a)(1))
 - * Home equity loans or lines of credit (12 CFR § 226.15(a)(2))
 - * Reverse mortgages (12 CFR § 226.15(a)(3))
- Notice requirements: Lenders must provide the consumer with a notice of the right to rescind, which must be in a form prescribed by the Bureau (12 CFR § 226.15(b)). The notice must be given to the consumer at the time the credit is extended or within three business days after the credit is extended (12 CFR § 226.15(c)).
- Rescission period: The consumer has three business days after receiving the notice to rescind the transaction (12 CFR § 226.15(d)). If the consumer exercises the right to rescind, the lender must take steps to cancel the

If that's the case, 12 CFR § 343.30 (Prohibited practices) covers the following:

- Prohibits banks from imposing a fee on the depository bank for the return of an item due to a payor bank's insolvency or dishonor.
- Prohibits banks from imposing a fee on the depository bank for the return of an item due to a payor bank's failure to make the item available on the second Federal Reserve business day after it is received.
- Prohibits banks from imposing a fee on the depository bank for the return of an item due to a payor bank's failure to make the item available on the first Federal Reserve business day after it is received, if the item is received on a non-business day.

Please note that this is a general explanation and may not be comprehensive or up-to-date. For the most accurate and current information, I recommend consulting the official Federal Reserve website or the Code of Federal Regulations.

Reinvestment Act (CRA) regulations.

If that is the case, 12 CFR § 1248.7, 'Remedial actions', states that a bank may be required to take remedial actions if it fails to meet the CRA performance standards. The regulation outlines the process for determining whether a bank is required to take remedial actions, including the factors that the Federal Reserve will consider in making this determination.

The regulation also outlines the types of remedial actions that a bank may be required to take, including:

- Increasing the bank's lending, investment, or service in the assessment area;
- Improving the bank's CRA rating;
- Providing additional community development financial assistance;
- Implementing a community development plan;
- Providing a report to the Federal Reserve on the bank's CRA activities.

The regulation also outlines the process for a bank to appeal a determination that it is required to take remedial actions.

Please note that this is a summary and not the full text of the regulation.

12 CFR § 404.1, 'General provisions', is part of the Federal Reserve's Regulation O, which governs insider transactions by bank executives and their affiliates.

The key provisions of 12 CFR § 404.1 are as follows:

- The regulation applies to certain bank executives and their affiliates (12 CFR § 404.1(a)).
- The regulation defines key terms, including 'affiliate', 'bank executive', 'covered transaction', and 'insider' (12 CFR § 404.1(b)).
- The regulation outlines the general scope and purpose of the regulation, which is to prevent bank executives and their affiliates from engaging in transactions that could be detrimental to the bank (12 CFR § 404.1(c)).
- The regulation also provides that the regulation is not intended to prohibit all transactions between bank executives and their affiliates, but rather to require disclosure and approval of certain transactions (12 CFR § 404.1(d)).

These provisions set the stage for the more specific requirements and restrictions outlined in the rest of Regulation O.

12 CFR § 1807.106, Presumptive Compliance with Other Federal Programs, is a regulation under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) that addresses the relationship between the FDIC's regulations and other federal programs.

In plain terms, this regulation states that if a bank is in compliance with the requirements of other federal programs, such as the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA), the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA), or the Fair Housing Act (FHA), it is presumed to be in compliance with the FDIC's regulations related to those same programs.

This means that if a bank is already meeting the requirements of another federal program, the FDIC will generally not require the bank to take additional steps to comply with its own regulations on the same topic. This is intended to reduce regulatory burden and promote consistency across different federal programs.

For example, if a bank is already in compliance with the CRA, the FDIC will presume that the bank is also in compliance with its own regulations related to community reinvestment, as outlined in 12 CFR § 1807.106.

The section of 12 CFR that addresses this issue is 12 CFR § 5.34.

12 CFR § 5.34 states that a bank holding company may not acquire control of a company that is engaged in the business of investing in or financing securities, if the acquisition would result in a prohibited transaction under section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U.S.C. 377).

However, 12 CFR § 5.34 also provides an exception for a bank holding company that acquires control of a mutual fund, if the bank holding company is acting as trustee for the mutual fund and the acquisition is solely for the purpose of acting as trustee.

In this case, the bank holding company would not be considered to have acquired control of the mutual fund for purposes of section 20 of the Banking Act of 1933, and therefore would not be prohibited from acquiring a majority of the shares of the mutual fund.

12 CFR § 3.155 Equity derivative contracts (Chapter I, Comptroller Of The Currency, Department Of The Treasury)

(a) Definitions. For purposes of this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) Equity derivative contract means a financial contract that is linked to the value of an equity security or an index of equity securities, and that is not a security futures contract, as defined in 7 U.S.C. 2(h)(7).

(2) Equity security means a security that is issued by a company and that represents an ownership interest in that company, including a security that is convertible into or exchangeable for such a security.

(3) Index of equity securities means a group of equity securities that is identified by a specific formula or methodology, and that is not a security futures contract, as defined in 7 U.S.C. 2(h)(7).

(b) Equity derivative contracts. (1) A national bank may enter into an equity derivative contract with a counterparty if the national bank:

(i) Has determined that the counterparty is a "qualified financial contract counterparty" as defined in 12 U.S.C. 1828(n)(1)(A); and 12 CFR § 211.22 outlines the requirements for foreign banking organizations (FBOs) engaging in interstate banking operations in the United States. The key provisions of this regulation are as follows:

- Definition of Foreign Banking Organization: 12 CFR § 211.22(a) defines a foreign banking organization as a bank or bank holding company that is a subsidiary of a foreign bank or a bank that is a subsidiary of a bank holding company that is a subsidiary of a foreign bank.
- Registration: 12 CFR § 211.22(b) requires FBOs to register with the Federal Reserve before engaging in interstate banking operations. The registration must include information about the FBO's organizational structure, its U.S. operations, and its foreign parent.
- Capital Requirements: 12 CFR § 211.22(c) requires FBOs to maintain a minimum level of capital, which is the same as that required for U.S. bank holding companies.
- Risk-Based Capital Requirements: 12 CFR § 211.22(d) requires FBOs to maintain a minimum risk-based capital ratio, which is the same as that required for U.S. bank holding companies.
- Risk Management: 12 CFR § 211

12 CFR § 19.113, "Recommended and final decisions," is a regulation under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) that deals with the process of making decisions regarding the deposit insurance of banks.

In plain terms, this section covers the procedures for making decisions about whether a bank should be insured by the FDIC, including:

1. The process for recommending a decision to the FDIC Board of Directors.
2. The factors that the FDIC staff should consider when making a recommendation.
3. The process for making a final decision by the FDIC Board of Directors.
4. The requirements for documenting and justifying the decision.

This regulation is part of the FDIC's process for ensuring that banks are sound and solvent before granting them deposit insurance, which protects depositors in the event of a bank failure.

I couldn't find any information on 12 CFR § 723.10. However, I can tell you that 12 CFR Part 723 is actually related to the Federal Reserve's Regulation H, which deals with member bank holding companies and their nonbanking activities and acquisitions.

If you're looking for information on state regulation of business lending, I would recommend checking the relevant state laws and regulations, as well as the federal laws and regulations that govern banking, such as the National Bank Act (12 U.S.C. § 24) and the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. § 22).

However, I can suggest that you might be looking for information on the National Bank Act's preemption of state laws, which is covered in 12 U.S.C. § 24 (Seventh). This section states that national banks are exempt from state laws that impose a burden on national banking, except for laws that are necessary to protect the public interest.

If you could provide more context or clarify what you're looking for, I'd be happy to try and assist you 12 CFR § 1011.5, Reimbursement, is a regulation under the Federal Reserve's Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) rules.

In plain terms, this section covers the reimbursement of costs incurred by a bank in connection with a CRA-related activity. The regulation states that a bank may reimburse its employees for expenses incurred while participating in CRA activities, such as attending community events or meetings. However, the reimbursement must be reasonable and not excessive.

The regulation also requires that the bank maintain records of the expenses and the CRA activities for which they were incurred. This is to ensure transparency and accountability in the bank's CRA activities.

Here's a direct quote from the regulation:

"(a) A bank may reimburse its employees for expenses incurred while participating in activities that benefit the community, as described in paragraph (b) of this section, if the reimbursement is reasonable and not excessive.

(b) A bank may reimburse its employees for expenses incurred while participating in the following activities:

- (1) Community development financial institution (CDFI) fund activities;
- (2) Community development loan fund activities;
- (3) Community development financial institution (CDFI) certification activities;
- (4) Community development activities, as described in 12 U.S.C. 4617(b)(2)

12 CFR § 1815.105, "Major decision points," is a regulation under the Federal Reserve's Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) rules.

In plain terms, this section outlines the major decision points that a financial institution must consider when evaluating a community development application. These decision points are the key factors that the institution will use to determine whether the application meets the CRA's community development standards.

The regulation requires that the institution consider the following major decision points:

1. The extent to which the proposed project will benefit low- and moderate-income (LMI) individuals and families.
2. The extent to which the proposed project will benefit the community, including the extent to which it will address a community need or problem.
3. The extent to which the proposed project will leverage public or private resources.
4. The extent to which the proposed project will be self-sustaining and financially viable.
5. The extent to which the proposed project will be consistent with the institution's community development strategy.

By considering these major decision points, the institution can make an informed decision about whether

Key provisions of 12 CFR § 1282.16 ('Special counting requirements'): (a) General. FHFA shall determine whether an Enterprise shall receive full, partial, or no credit toward achievement of any of the housing goals for a transaction that otherwise qualifies under this part. In this determination, FHFA will consider whether a transaction or activity of the Enterprise is substantially equivalent to a mortgage purchase and either creates a new market or adds liquidity to an existing market, provided however that such mortgage purchase actually fulfills the Enterprise's purposes and is in accordance with its Charter Act. (b) Not counted. The following transactions or activities shall not be counted for purposes of the housing goals and shall not be included in the numerator or the denominator in calculating either Enterprise's performance under the housing goals, even if the transaction or activity would otherwise be counted pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section:

(1) Equity investments in low-income housing tax credits; (2) Purchases of State and local government housing bonds except as provided in paragraph (c)(8) of this section; (3) Purchases of single-family non-conventional mortgages and multifamily non-conventional mortgages, except:

However, I can suggest some possible alternatives to find the information you are looking for:

1. Check the official website of the Federal Reserve or the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) for the most up-to-date information on banking regulations.
2. Search for the correct section number or title in the 12 CFR, which may be a different section or regulation.
3. If you have any more information about the section, such as the title or a specific topic it covers, I can try to help you find the relevant information.

If you are looking for information on special counting requirements, you may want to check 12 CFR § 208.51, which covers the "Counting requirements" for certain types of deposits.

12 CFR § 1101.1, "Scope and purpose," is part of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) regulations.

In plain terms, this section explains the scope and purpose of the OCC's regulations, which are primarily focused on national banks and federal savings associations.

Specifically, it states that the OCC's regulations apply to national banks and federal savings associations, and that they are intended to implement the laws and policies of the OCC, as well as to provide guidance to these institutions on their operations and activities.

The section also notes that the OCC's regulations are in addition to, and do not supersede, other federal laws and regulations that apply to national banks and federal savings associations.

So, in essence, this section sets the stage for the rest of the OCC's regulations, which provide detailed guidance on a wide range of topics related to national banks and federal savings associations.

Summarize the key provisions of 12 CFR § 229.16, 'Specific availability policy disclosure'.

Reference answer (ground truth, expects § 229.16)

Key provisions of 12 CFR § 229.16 ('Specific availability policy disclosure'): (a) General. To meet the requirements of a specific availability policy disclosure under §§ 229.17 and 229.18(d), a bank shall provide a disclosure describing the bank's policy as to when funds deposited in an account are available for withdrawal. The disclosure must reflect the policy followed by the bank in most cases. A bank may impose longer delays on a case-by-case basis or by invoking one of the exceptions in § 229.13, provided this is reflected in the disclosure. (b) Content of specific availability policy disclosure. The specific availability policy disclosure shall contain the following, as applicable—
(1) A summary of the bank's availability policy; (2) A description of any categories of deposits or checks used by the bank when it delays availability (such as local or nonlocal checks); how to determine the category to which a particular deposit or check belongs; and when each category will be available for withdrawal (including a description of the bank's business days and when a deposit is considered received);

12 CFR § 1805.700, "Evaluation and selection-general," is part of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) regulations.

In plain terms, this section covers the general requirements for evaluating and selecting a bank's service providers, such as third-party vendors or contractors. The section outlines the FDIC's expectations for banks to ensure that their service providers are reliable, trustworthy, and meet the bank's needs.

The section requires banks to:

1. Develop a process for evaluating and selecting service providers.
2. Consider factors such as the provider's reputation, experience, and financial condition.
3. Assess the provider's ability to meet the bank's needs and comply with applicable laws and regulations.
4. Monitor the provider's performance and take corrective action if necessary.

By following these requirements, banks can ensure that they are working with reliable and trustworthy service providers, which is essential for maintaining the safety and soundness of the bank and protecting its customers' interests.

Please note that this is a general explanation, and the specific requirements may vary depending on the context and the bank's specific situation.

12 CFR § 1010.508 addresses the effect of suspension of certification granted under 15 U.S.C. 1708(a)(2).

The key provisions of this regulation are as follows:

- When a certification granted under 15 U.S.C. 1708(a)(2) is suspended, the institution must provide sufficient protection to consumers (12 CFR § 1010.508(a)).
- The institution must take prompt action to provide sufficient protection to consumers, which may include, but is not limited to, the following:
 - Refunding any fees paid by consumers (12 CFR § 1010.508(b)(1));
 - Providing a written notice to consumers explaining the suspension of certification and the actions the institution will take to provide sufficient protection (12 CFR § 1010.508(b)(2));
 - Taking other actions as necessary to protect consumers (12 CFR § 1010.508(b)(3)).
- The institution must also provide a written notice to the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection (Bureau) within 30 days of the suspension of certification (12 CFR § 1010.508(c)).
- The institution must continue to provide sufficient protection to consumers until the certification is reinstated or the institution is no longer subject
